POLO SEASON IN MANILA

PHOTOGRAPHS BY JEFFREY M. SANCHEZ

Showcase of muscular horses and sweaty macho men

By Jeff M. Sanchez

It was a hot day in Manila, and the sun was beating down on the polo field. The players, dressed in their red and white uniforms, were in the middle of a game. The horses, muscular and powerful, were galloping across the field. The crowd, consisting of polo enthusiasts and spectators, was cheering and watching intently. The game was fast-paced and exciting, with players using their mallets to strike the ball. The horses' manes and tails were flying in the wind, adding to the dramatic scene. The players' sweat-soaked jerseys and the dust kicked up by the horses' hooves created a sense of intense action. The polo season in Manila was in full swing, and this game was just one of many that showcased the skill and athleticism of the players and the power of the horses.

The polo season in Manila is a popular event, attracting a large number of spectators. The players, who are often professional or semi-professional, are seen as heroes by the crowd. The game is not only a test of skill and strategy but also a display of the physical prowess of the horses and players. The polo field is a well-maintained grassy area, and the game is played under strict rules. The players' uniforms are a mix of traditional polo attire and modern sportswear. The game is a blend of tradition and modernity, and it continues to be a beloved sport in Manila.
